One day they them, and wondered if they would be cut down a number of small spruce trees, and put them together like an Indian tent, a picture of which they had seen, bound together at the top, and filled in all the open spaces with rushes and long grass that grew near hy. It made a very nice tent; and they then brought in hundles of dry branches and grass for beds, until they dog's black unzzle was seen and a pair thought they would as lieve be lost as not, with so much to make them comfortable. But they got tired of it at last, and then went home.

Among other things which they did. they set traps for rabbits and birds; and though they seldom caught anything, they hoped they might. The winter was about setting in, and there had been a slight fall of snow, when one day they saw near their house the tracks of several rabbits; and they thought they would go out and look after their traps and see if any little animals had got into them. Jack had that day gone to town with his master; so the boy determined to go without him. They went away before dinner, and, as their kind mother feared they might be hungry, she did them up a joy; and the men outside shoveled the large hundle of bread and other things to eat, telling them to be eareful and be back in good season.

The day was clear and bright, and light. they went away very happily into the woods. They went here and there, snow and told the neighbors of the loss looking at their old traps and making of her boys; and they had all turned new ones, when, before they knew it, out to find them as soon as the storm the sun was hid by clouds, a sudden was over. They never would have wind rocked the trees, and snow began found them, however, if Jack had not to fall very fast. They were a good been there. He remembered the tent way into the woods, but made nogreat in the forest, and as soon as he guessed that man? He is my agent? He rephaste to return, and when they tried what they were in search of he dashed to find the way out the snow had covered the ground, and they did not barking called the neighbors to it know which way to go. confer the title of "empress of India" upon Queen Victoria. This was foreshadowed in the Queen's speech last week, when she said:

At the time that the direct government of my Indian Empire was transferred to the crown, no formal addition was made to the style and title of the sovereign. I have deemed the present a fitting opportunity for supplying this omission, and a fall upon the snhject will be presented to you.

Victoria has been called "Queen of Great Britain and the Colonies" since November 1, 1858, when the East India Company's domination in India ceased, and the governor of that country was then called the viceroy. THE Courier-Journal.

For the Centennial Year,

During all the century of our national existence, no one year has perhaps empolicel so much of interest and impor time as will be compassed within the twelve months of the Centennial Ann versary. The year 1876 witnesses in th popular Congressional body the return t power of the great National Democracy which will be watched with intense in terest in its every movement. The grea Centennial Exposition, illustrating and emphasizing every phase of the nation' progress, side by side with the develope ments of universal civilization, will affor a constant fund of incident and information, which, to the great mass of the people, can only be reflected by the newspaper of broad scope and commanding resources. The Presidential contest of the year, with the great diversity of interestiand opinions, and the anomalone alignment of men, and parties, and sections will be fought with a skill, energy an weariness only equaled by the moment one results depending upon the grea

An era oo full of interest signalizes the ertraordinary need of all the people for means of information and instruction, an stinulates the press to its highest possi-bilities. Conscious of this need, and in

LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL s determined that its Forty-sixth year shall more than maintain its supremacy as the great newspaper of the West and

The Courier-Journal combines the experience, ability and material resources of three old time Louisville newspapers of national repute—the Louisville Couri-er, Louisville Journal and Louisville Democrat—and is fortified in the respect ent Democratic position will be fully maintained, and all its departments will he most carefully prepared. It gives, in the course of a year, several attractive serial novels, romances, &c., written expressly lor its columns; its telegraphic eummary faithfully reflects all the news of the world; able special correspondents write from all the great capitals; the tinancial and commercial reports are copions and trustworthy; the agricultural department is becoming more and more complete and interesting; the Patrons of Husbandry have in the Couries-lournal the advantage of a great newspaper; published in the city of their National Headquarters, with a grange department written by a member of the order, whose devotion, ability and prudence are universally acknowledged; wit, satire, gossip and paragraphic pungency are represent-ed in many varied departments.

The Courier-lotanal is submitted to the people as embracing a combination of all the conservative elements which have joined bands over the altar of the Constitution in forming a grent, untional, Democratic party. It is also presented as the largest, livest and cheapest newspaper in America. No other paper published in the South or Southwest can approach it in these respects.

For the truth of these assertions, the reader is simply requested to compare the COURTER-JOURNAL line by line and paper south of the Ohio river. If the result is not lound to leave a balance in its favor, we will not urge the point. Our aim is to produce the best article on the market and to sell it cheapest. The law of trade applies not less to newspapers than to other articles of every-day 3 life. We look to the unvarying rule of this great common law for our success -By giving the public the largest, livest, ullest, fresheet, cheapest and most representative press, the Counter-Journal |expects to surpass all rivalry in circulaon and influence.

REPRESENTATIVE AND CHAMP-ION OF AMERICAN ART TANTE

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875-RIGHTH THAR.

THE ALDINE THE ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA, ISSUED MONTHLY.

A MAGNIFICANT CONCEPTION WON-DERFULLY CARRIED OUT.

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of and great ertists has always been recognized, and meny attempts have been made to meet the wast. The successive feitures which have so inveriebly followed each ettempt in this consury to establish en art journel, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high ert. So soon or a proper appreciation of the went and an ability to meet it were shawn, the public at once reliied with enthusiesem to its support, ont the recent was a preat ertistic end commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

The Aidine while Issued with all of the regularity, has none of the temperary ar timely interests characteristic of ordinary periodicale. It is an elegant miscelleny of pure, light, and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the reset collection of ertistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number efforts a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and bourty of The Aldina will be meet appreciated after it is bound up at the cless of the year. While other publications may claim superior chappers, as compared with rivale of a similar class. The Aldina is a unique and original conception—clone and unapprached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The peacessar of a complete value cannot duplicate the quentity of fine paper and engrevings in any other shape ar number of volumes, for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chrome, besides?

The actional fecture of The Ald ne meet be teken in no nervow sees. Tran art is cosmopolitan. While The Aldina is a strictly American institution. BARRETT & BONNER,

The uctional fecture of The Aid no mest be taken in no nerrow seese. Trun art is cosmopolitae. While The Aidina is a strictly American institution, it does not confine literif to the perroduction of native est. Its mission is to cuitivete a broad end appreciative estetete, one that will discriminate an grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while pleading before the patrons of The Aidine, or a leading choracteristic, the productions of the most noted American estists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign mesters, giving subscribers att the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home as foreign sources.

The cristic lilustration of American recovery original with The Aldina is an important fectore, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriete to the satisfectory treatment af dateils than can be afforded by any inferior of the indicious interpretation of landscapa, pege. The indicions interspersion of lend-capa, marine, figure and animal subjects, sustain an marine, figure and animal subjects, sustain an anabated luterest, impossible where the seepe of the work couffies the artist too elesely to a single style of subject. The literature of The Aldine is a tight and graceful accompanium at worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not luteriers with the popular interest of the work.
